“I cannot, using the parlance of our time, properly mourn your passing. This is what this age required of you: The cold simple heroism. It was a poem for the times we live in.” ~Lin Hui-yin~

In the early days of World War II in the Pacific theater, the Republic of China (ROC) suffered immeasurably at the hands of invading Japanese imperial forces. At that time, the ROC only had 300 aircraft while Japanese Air Force had over 2,000. The Rocking Sky depicts not only the ROC pilots' bravery and youth, now faded, but also mourns the romances that were buried with them.
