Under the legislation, Taiwan will reduce its carbon emissions to 50% of 2005 levels by the year 2050. It's solar industry chain is complete, with superior advantages in mid-stream silicon solar cells. The global market share is second in the world, only next to mainland China. In addition, Taiwan has an impressive recycling rate of 55% and recycles 73% of its plastic. Its endeavor to global sustainability is not second to any of the global village.
