EARTHQUAKES

An earthquake is a weak to violent shaking of the ground produced by the sudden movement of rock materials below the earth's surface. Aftershocks are smaller earthquakes that occur in the same general area during the days to years following a larger event or "main shock".

Magnitude and Intensity measure different characteristics of earthquakes. Magnitude measures the energy released at the source of the earthquake and is determined from measurements on seismographs. Intensity measures the strength of shaking produced by the earthquake at a certain location. Intensity is determined from effects on people, human structures, and the natural environment.

Most injuries during earthquakes are caused by falling debris, flying broken glass, fire triggered by ruptured LPG lines, damaged electrical lines or equipment and collapse of structure.

Before an earthquake

Building contents may pose a significant hazard in the event of an earthquake. As part of the preventive planning, tenant must do the following:

- Large furniture such as bookshelves, suspended light fixtures, ceiling fans and storage cabinets shall be properly anchored to walls or ceilings so that they shall not fall during an earthquake.
- Contents shall be stored to minimize potential damage.
- Heavy objects shall be placed on lower shelves.
- Glass and other breakable objects shall be stored in latched cabinets or on lower shelves.
- Harmful chemicals and flammable materials shall be stored and secured correctly.

During the earthquake

Building occupants are advised to observe the following during an earthquake.

- Perform "Duck, Cover and Hold" during the entire course of building movement.
- Remain in the building during an earthquake since most injuries occur when people try to leave or enter the building.
- People outside the building shall remain outside and move away from the structure, power lines, streetlights and utility lines.
- People inside the building shall move away from glass windows or glass partitions and seek cover under sturdy object such as solid desk or table.

- People caught inside their car shall stop the vehicle from moving and remain inside and pull over until the shaking stops.

After an Earthquake

An earthquake is usually followed by a series of tremors (aftershocks) and people are advised to do the following:

- Building occupants shall listen carefully to any instructions or announcements made by the PMO over the Public Address (PA) and Fire Alarm Systems.
- The Property Management Office will assess and evaluate potential damage or injuries and advise the building occupants through the PA and the Fire Alarm Systems to either remain or evacuate the building.
- Tenant's fire brigade shall assess the situation on their respective floor and relay the information to the Security Office where the Building's Emergency Response Team can quickly size-up the situation and plan the priorities.
- Refrain from sightseeing and using your phone while evacuating as you may expose yourself and others to possible risk or injury.
- Do not smoke or use open flames.
- Working telephone lines shall only be utilized for emergency use.

FIRE

Building occupants are advised to observe the following in case of fire:

- Stay calm. DO NOT PANIC. Call for help.
- Shout "FIRE" and activate the nearest fire alarm pull station.
- Advise the Property Management or Security Office immediately, if possible.
- Try to put out the fire with a portable fire extinguisher.
- When the fire alarm sounds or when an order for evacuation is announced, all building occupants should observe the following:
 - immediately cease all work or any other activity;
 - if time permits, secure all important papers and vital documents, including cash valuables, in a safe or vault;
